A NEW RODERICK DHU!

A Girl on the Mountain Tops Winds a Fox-Horn, and the "Moonshine" Clans Gather in Force.

Atlanta Constitution, 2d. A strange and picturesque story comes to us from the mountains of Towns county. The authority that we have at present is the official report of the deputy in charge of the squad which was interested. It appears that a few nights ago a deputy marshal of Marshal fitzsimon's force, with seven assistant deputies and eight guards, organized for a raid into Towns county. One of the objects of the raid was to capture a man by the name of Berrony, who was reported to be a "moonshiner," and the leader of a band of men organized for the purpose of defying the revenue officers and protecting the hidden stills of the mountain branches. The raiding party moved along quietly and by nightfall was in the neighborhood of Berrony's house. They waited until the family had gone to sleep and then surrounded the house and closed in on the unsuspecting family. Berrony, though surprised while asleep, SPRANG FROM HIS BED AND FLED, clad only in his night clothes. Despite this light weight, he was overtaken by the deputies and tied. In the meantime his family had awakened and came to the door in more or less confusion, and making a good deal of fuss. While the deputies were engaged with the prisoner and the people at the door, a daughter of the prisoner, about eighteen years of age slipped out of the back door, dressed only in the garments in which she had been sleeping, and made for the mountain side with the fleetness of a young antelope. She carried in her right hand a fox-horn, and fled through the night like an

As rapidly as possible the deputy had the prisoner dressed, and forming his men into close order, moved off toward his wagons. He and his men were followed by the family of the prisoner, which was constantly reinforced by the arrival of the mountaineers, aroused and angry. By the time the deputies had gone a mile the threatening force behind had grown to twenty or twenty-five men, and things looked squally. When THEY HAD REACHED A LONG, NARROW

DEFILE. the deputy in charge found that there was a large force of men in front of him, and that each side of the defile was held by sharp-shooting mountaineers, who were hidden in the woods. The force in his rear was pressed closer on him, and he called a halt and began to look into things. He found his situation desperate. He could but bloodshed and death, He therethat, though it be little, you are yet fore began to parley. The mountaineers demanded the release of Berrony, who is said to have been their leader. The deputy at first protested and refused, but he soon found that there were fifty men opposed to him with the advantages of position. The men agreed that certain discovered stills should be given up, but they would not listen to Berroney being taken away. At length the deputy surrendered him, and he joined his friends in the woods.

A LATER ACCOUNT. Mr. Robinson, the deputy marshal who was in charge of the raiding party, has reached the city and gives a full account of the affair. He says that it is impossible to overestimate the defiance with which the mountaineers met the officers.

When his friends began to gather in the woods and darkness came on he would call out to them, "There's only twelve of them here, but they're armed to the teeth. Don't attack them till the rest of the boys come!"

When an attack seemed imminent one of the deputies said to Berrony: "Throw up your hat and tell them not to shoot." Berrony laughed and said: "If I throw up my hat they'll a day of the natr. benzoic pulver.

He talked with his ambushed friends with the utmost freedom and nonchaiance, and seemed to be jolly over the crowd of them that was gathering. Thus did this elderly couple feel interested in the unknown youth, to whom the wayside and the maple were as a secret chamber, with the rich gloom of damask curtains brooding over him. Perceiving that a stray sunbeam glimmered down upon his face, the lady contrived to twist a branch so as to intercept it. And having done this act of kindness, she began to feel like a moth-

The deputies returned the fire, and being armed with United States breech-loading rifles, were enabled to drive the illicit distiller off. Collector Clarke expresses the opinion the part of the illicit distillers throughout the entire mountain section to resist revenue officers. The North Carolina District---How Appointments in Connection With the Census are to be Made. House of Representatives, Washington, Decembers.

To the Editor of The Observer: Inasmuch as the supervisors dis-tricts have been laid off by the Secretary of the Interior, and many persons are interested in knowning in what district they are located, I take the liberty of giving the information through the daily papers published in the sixth congressional district. The lief that knavery goes further than supervisors of the census are appointhonesty in the management of an ed by the President, with the approval of the Senate, and the enumerators (or census takers) by the supervisors. As the President will doubtless consult Gen. Francis A. Walker, the superintendent, all persons desiring appointments by him should address their applications accordingly, forti-fied with such testimonials of their character and fitness as they may choose to give. Persons wishing to act as enumerators should apply to the disrtict supervisor. There will be oue census taker for every 4,000 inhabitants, and the compensation will probably vary from $120 to $250, depending upon circumstances. All of their work is required to be done during the month of June. Both positions being of great importance, men of business qualifications, and no others, should be appointed.

If the newspapers will again publish the substance of the law on the subect, and it is read by persons interested, it will save them and me some trouble and expense. The supervisors will probably be appointed within

WALTER L. STEELE. KILLED BY A METEOR .--- As David Meisenthaler, the vell known stock is a colored pattern, full page, for a man of Whitstone township was glove-box, in addition to patterns for driving his cows to the barn about daylight this morning, he was struck by an ærolite and instantly killed. It appears as if the meteor had come from a little west or south and fell obliquely at an angle of about sixty degrees, for it first passed through a tall maple, cutting the limbs as clean as if it had been a cannon ball, and then struck him apparently on or under the shoulder, passing clean through him obliquely from below the right shoulder to above the left hip, and buried itself about two feet in the soft black ground. The poor man's legs are injured, but the greater part of his body seemed to have been crushed into the earth beneath the terrible ærolite, which is about the size of a common patent bucket, and apparently of a roughly round shape, It appears to be formed of what is called iron pyrites .-- Bucyrus (O.)

Ayer's Ague Cure,

Chis is a compound remedy, prepared with scientific skill, from vegetable ingredients, which rarely falls to cure the severest cases of Chilfs and Fever and the conconitant disorders. Such a remedy the necessities of the people in maintious districts demand. Its great superjority over any other medicine—yet discovered for the care of Intermittents is, that it contains no quinine or mineral, and those who take it are free from danger of supilian or any injurious effects.

nine or mineral, and those who take it are free from danger of quiniam or any injurious effects, and are as healthy after using it as before. It has been extensively employed during the last thirty years in the treatment of these distressing disorders, and so unvarying has been its success that it has gained the reputation of being infallible. It can, therefore, be safely recommended as a sure remedy and specific for the Pewer and Ague of the West, and the Chills and Fever of the South. It counteracts the miasmatic poison in the blood, and frees the system from its infuence, so that fever and ague, sankes or chills, once broken up by it, do not return until if the disease is again contracted.

The great variety of theorders which arise from the irritation of this poison, such as Neuralgia, Rheuantism, Gont, Headache, Blipdness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Spienic Affections, Hysterics, Pain in the Bourals, Colic, Paralysis, and derange of the Stomach, all of which become integritten or periodical, have no specifier remedy than Ayen's Ague Cunz, which cares them all alike, and protects the system from fune attacks. As a presention, it as of importance actions. Aven's Ague Cure, which cures them all alike, and protects the system from future attacks. As a preventive, it is of immense service in those communities where Fever and Ague prevails, as it stays the development of the disease if taken on the first approach of the premoistory symptoms. Travellers and temporary residents are thus enabled to defy these disorders, and few will ever suffer if they avail themselves of the protection this remiedy affords.

For Liver Complaints, affising from torpidity, it is an excellent remedy; it stimulates this organ into healthy activity, and produces many remarkable cures where other medicines full. Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.

A modest maiden, yet a wise. With chestnut hair and harel eyes, Whose glance one always liked to meet, So deep its gaze, so calm and sweet; Clear beaming with a quiet gladness, Subdued as by an unknown sadness; Too trustful in its holy love For aught but purer worlds above.

A low, broad brow, with dreamy though And noble aspirations fraught; A subtle mingling in the whole Of earthy clay and heavenly soul; A face that meet it where I might. In joy to-day, in woe to-night, Would cause (and why I cannot tell) The hot tears to my eyes to well.

Twas so one day she crossed my path. I half believed her not of earth, I half believed her not of earth, So sweet that wistful gaze; in vain I turned away, for look again I must; and then I knew too well by that, in which e'en lay the spell, That hidden something told too true, That me'er in heavenly gardens grew, As yet, this blossom, all too rare For earthy soil and earthy air.

Ah! sweet, shy flower, 'twas not for long That thou didst mingle with the throng; at thou unconscious shed'st a ray of purity athwart their way, as thou their guardian angel wert. Though how with heavenly armor girt. I'd not recall thee, though my eyes are dim with tears; though choking sighs Fill my sad heart with many an ache. Country Social Life.

Country folks are in general so fully occupied with affairs that they have no time to discover how lonesome they really are. So far as this is concerned we think it is a misfortune. We are too busy. We work too hard. We take few, or no holidays. We read and think too little, and do not spend sufficient time in social culture. There is no reason why those who plow the soil or "whose talk is of the bullock," should not experience the refinements which are the result of formal social life. In business, at bargains, in pursuit of dollars, no man is seen at his best. He is thorny, spiney, with his back up as a porcupine might be his business. Let one doff his working clothes and enter a room full of neighbors men, women, young men and maidens-and he is a man of another kind. He naturally falls into the ways of an intuitive kindness which is really the truest politeness; the doing to his companion what he should do to him. He "lets himself out" to please, and after an evening spent in social converse, he retires with many rough corners and asperities toned down. For a few days the influence remains. It would be permanent if it could be reinforced now and then, and the good results would be most agreeable and useful. There is no difficulty in bringing these good influences

Medical Men, Mechanics and Operators all recommend the famous light-running for the following reasons: It is the Lightest running. It is the most noiseless. It is the simplest and best made machine. Its fension is elastic, so it breaks no thread. It carries a larger bobbin and more thread than any other machine. It winds the bobbin without running the machine or throwing off the driving band. It is made with Concentric motions and will not wear out.

Domestic Sewing Machine,

The DOMESTIC has gone far ahead of all other machines in all the cities of the United States, and has never before been offered in competition
